

RACE & SEPTEMBER 11TH 2011: TEN YEARS LATER...

Since 2001, Islamophobia and anti-Muslim sentiments have grown. Globally, Islamophobia is cited as one of the increased racist hate crimes. How have the 10 years since Sept 11, 2001 defined and re-defined our view of Islam and of racialized, minority groups in North America?

The Race and Anti-Racism Network (RAN) at UFV invites you to a dialogue and discussion on issues of race, racism, gender and communities.

Guest speakers

Sidrah Ahmad

Sidrah is a recent UFV grad and currently works with the UFV Student Life department. She has been involved with the UFV Muslim Student's Club on campus and was one of the organizers of UFV's 2011 student conference on anti-racism. As a Muslim, Sidrah enjoys sharing the faith and traditions with others, and believes dialogue and determination promotes understanding and helps to remove boundaries.

Itrath Syed

PhD student in the School of Communication at Simon Fraser University where her doctoral project involves an analysis of moral panics involving Muslim bodies in the West. Itrath is also an Instructor in the Women's Studies department at Langara College.

Alison Wainwright

Current coordinator of Diversity Education and Resource Services at Abbotsford Community Services. This program implements community development initiatives which address topics related to diversity and responding to discrimination. Alison has over 10 years' experience in the diversity education field.
