

Comedy Night

SUZANNE KITTELL
STAFF WRITER

On Monday, October 27th, UFV's South Asian Peer Network Association put on a charity comedy night at Casey's. Tickets were sold throughout the week and at the door, with the proceeds going to the Abbotsford Food Bank. SAPNA had two comedians performing, Ivan Decker and Sunnee Dhaliwal, two people I honestly didn't have high expectations for. Nothing personal, but good amateur comedy is hard to find. Well, congratulations SAPNA, you found it.

Ivan Decker opened the show and, aside from a couple unnecessary technical difficulties throughout his bit, was a hit. His combination of taking the piss out of others, and then doing the same to himself warmed the audience right up for the headliner. So we in the crowd were given some relatively clean humour before being delightfully appalled by the very funny Sunnee Dhaliwal.

Sunnee didn't shy away from the offensive and the disgusting, but also didn't cross the line into obnoxious, a delicate balance to which many amateur comedians are oblivious. From the size of his testicles, to incest, to panty-clad grannies, Sunnee gave the audience a whole lot more than they were expecting.

Self deprecating and unashamed, Sunnee is a rare breed among amateur comedians, especially in Abbotsford. He had great timing and although he seemed to be flying from the seat of his pants, his whole set came across as very natural. I wouldn't be surprised to find out that Sunnee was entertaining in utero.

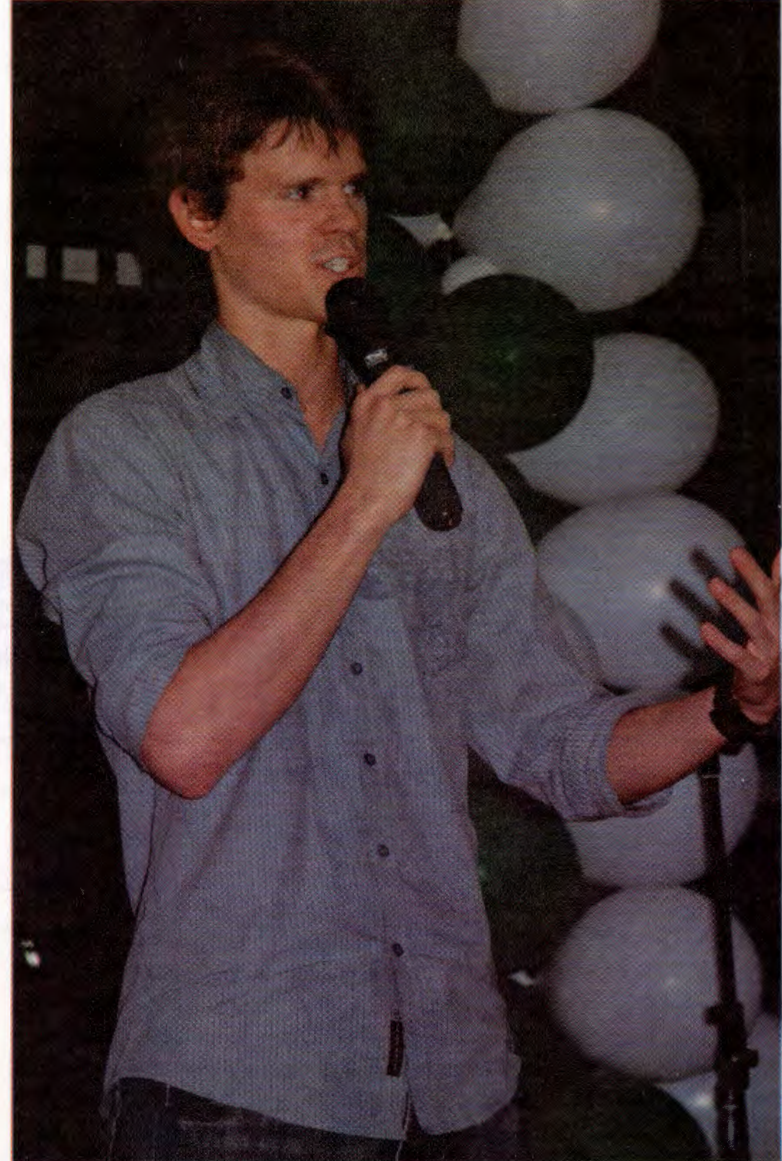

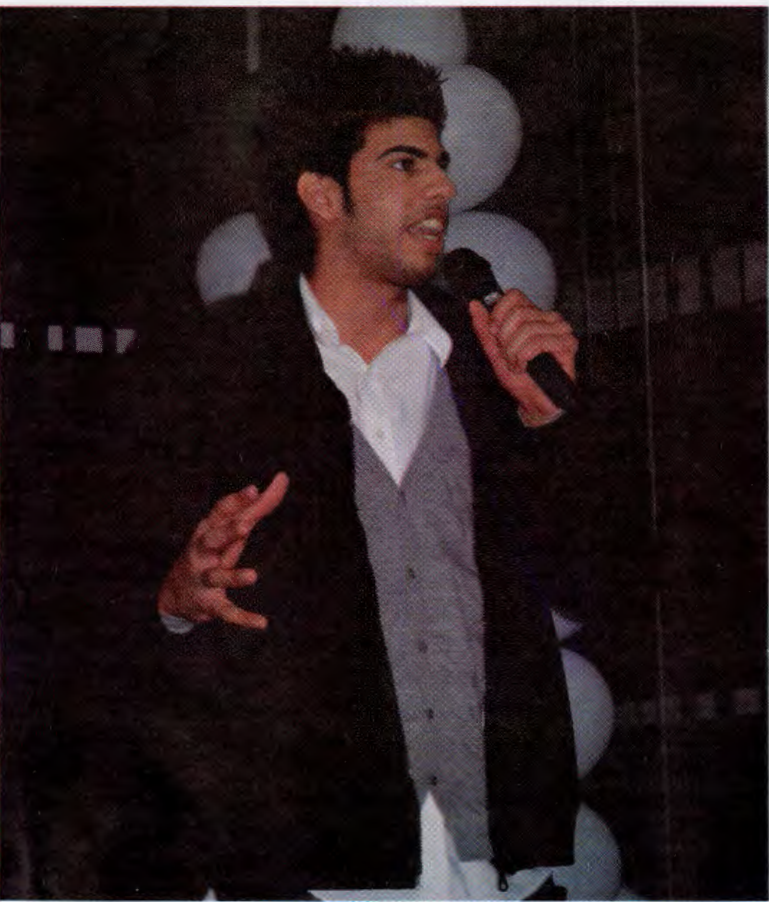

The night didn't last long (or maybe it just flew by) but it was a night well spent, and was quite the satisfactory substitute for the class I should have been in (shhh!). Ivan and Sunnee put on an amazing show and helped hungry people at the same time. Now that's just teetering on superheroish.

If you missed Ivan and Sunnee's performances last week, I highly suggest that you do quite the opposite in the future. They're worth your time, comedy lovers. They're also worth the money you'll have to spend on new pants after they make you pee in the ones you're wearing.

Well played sirs, well played.

COMEDY NIGHT!!

055

SAPNA

Presents,

Sunee Dhaliwal & Ivan Decker

MONDAY 27TH OCTOBER

@ CASEY'S

For more information

Call: Raji @ 778 997 5115 or

Bal @ 778 549 2824

Email: sapna.ufv@gmail.com

No entry without tickets

$5/UFV Students

$7/ Non UFV Students

$8 At the Door