The film tells the story of Ayesha, a widow who lives with her adored son Saleem in the village of Charkhi, in Pakistani Punjab. General Zia-ul-Haq places Pakistan under Martial Law, imposing a strict Islamic code. Saleem, unemployed and bored, finds himself caught up in the fervor of Islamic fundamentalism. Events snowball when Sikh pilgrims from India pour into the village, and Ayesha suddenly finds herself confronted by buried memories from her past.

The screening will be followed by a panel discussion.
